Abstract: The purpose of writing this article is to inform about the importance of girls' education and its importance in economy, politics and social life. As most people know, in the past in many countries it was almost impossible and forbidden for girls to get an education. However, by now this concept has changed drastically. The reason why people want education of women and girls not only for themselves but also for family members, society and it is also proved to be very important and useful for economy and also to reduce disappointments. During the past times, women, especially girls, have suffered a lot of discrimination by men, which has led to an increase in their mortality, unemployment and especially, social problems will increase due to illiteracy of women and girls. Currently, Gender Equality for Girls has been established, which ensures girls' quality education and safety. At the same time, UNICEF also makes a great contribution to the education of girls and creates opportunities for girls and women who receive and do not receive material and spiritual education. As a result, illiteracy is also prevented.

Today, the education sector has developed and this process continues. Despite this, there were some problems in the education of girls in the past. If we look at past times, we can see that most scientists and writers were men. Because the education of girls has been stigmatized for many years in many eras and, unfortunately, similar thoughts are still sometimes encountered. The education of girls is more important than the education of boys. When girls get an education, not only one person but the whole family gets an education will be equal. It is not just a simple thing. This has also been proven by many scientists from different countries.

Fortunately, we see that things like this have improved a lot these days. People all over the world have realized that girls' education is important and necessary, accordingly, they are trying to accelerate this process. Parents are not the only ones responsible for a girl child's education. They can only be its causes. One of the main tasks of teachers is to educate girls, educate them and educate them to become useful personnel and specialists for the future. Of course, schools, colleges, universities, and preschool, educational institutions were established for this purpose.

Education is as important as air, food and shelter for both men and women. Some girls in India are considered a burden to their parents. People think that girls should be raised first and then married off and sent to another home. Boys are considered more entitled to education because they are considered the legal heirs of the family. There are several reasons why they think this way. Firstly, parents prefer a child who will take care of them in their old age so they invest in boys' education and think it is better than investing in a girl child. Because the girls go to another house and their future income also goes to another one also. These are all mistakes and misconceptions.

Since, there are several reasons for this. First, investing in girls' education transforms communities, countries and the world. In addition, girls who receive education are less likely to marry young and more likely to live healthy, productive lives. On the other hand, they earn a good amount of income, participate in the decisions that affect them most, and can build a better future for themselves and their families in those decisions. It should also be said that girls' education strengthens the economy and reduces inequality.

If girls are guaranteed secondary school education:

- girls' income will increase
- the national growth rate will increase
- the rate of child marriage will decrease
- maternal mortality rate will decrease

Education is salvation. Therefore, we should always support it. For instance, we can take "UNICEF" and "Gender equality".

Gender education system provides equal opportunities for girls and boys. Through Gender equality, it ensures that women and girls are able to protect themselves and have a place in education and work.

Educating girl children will help in improving the health of the women if she has the proper knowledge. The future of the girl, her family, society, and the nation will be brighter and better. It will also help in growing the economy of the country if more women will participate in financial activities. The major problems like unemployment and poverty will be eradicated.
